Mr Charles Haviland of BBC News Appreciated the INTACH Dibrugarh Chapter for John Berry White Restoration and Renovation Project

INTACH Dibrugarh Chapter: The first medical institution of the northeast, Dr John Berry White Medical School which was lying in a state of disrepair for year is going to receive a new life. Oil India Limited (OIL) has signed a MoU with INTACH to convert the abandoned hospital into a medical museum. The Chapter received a letter of appreciation for the gradual restoration and renovation works are being done at the medical school by Mr Charles Haviland, Former Correspondent of BBC News in South Asia. He visited the site last year. He wrote that “I would like to congratulate INTACH Dibrugarh Chapter and all those involved in the Dr John Berry White Medical School Restoration and Renovation Project. It is good to witness the gradual restoration of the once derelict building with painstaking adherence to authority and use of appropriate and attractive materials.” He also wrote about the inspiring decision chosen to celebrate the legacy of a philanthropist and medic during this modern era of considerable medical need and often divisive rhetoric – a testimony to the value of healing and of overcoming social fragmentation.’
